

LPCAAA

Board of Directors
JOB DESCRIPTIONS

Revised June 2018

LEAD BY EXAMPLE

Effective presidents take their role model responsibility because they know that the most powerful form of leadership is leadership by example. They accept the logic that members are only going to work as hard as they do and that excellence requires a great deal of volunteer time on the part of the members.

Probably the most important message a president can communicate is an abiding sense of personal and professional integrity. A president is living proof that one can be flexible in approach and accommodating in application, yet firm when it comes to principle.

Presidents cannot be all things to all people, and those who try may destroy themselves in the process of striving to meet the unrealistic expectations. As role models for their members, they are called upon to set the tone and lead by example. They need to uphold professional standards and conduct themselves in an ethical manner. They are neither saints nor heroes; they are merely honest people who work with others to benefit the organization.
